PARTICIPATION IN NATIONAL AND          INTERNATIONAL RESEARCH PROJECTS

Sep. 2023 - onwards Project	Head of research unit (University of Siena, partner) Lessons learned? The past and future of Italian defence policy (PRIN 2022) Through a process tracing approach, relying on secondary and primary sources (survey experiments, interviews, content analysis of official documents and speeches), the research devotes a specific attention to three crucial aspects: a) the (political and military) lessons learned from Italian missions; b) the drivers and the features of the complex decision-making process behind the operations; c) the agenda-related and issue-specific positions on Italy's defense and security policy of both Italian elites and public opinion based on previous MOA and future defense scenarios.
Apr. 2021 – Jul. 2024 Project	Member of research unit (University of Siena, partner) JOINT: Understanding and Strengthening EU Foreign and Security Policy in a Complex and Contested World (Horizon 2020) JOINT aims to advance knowledge of how EU foreign and security policy can become more joined-up and sustainable in an increasingly complex and contested world. As a member of the University of Siena's team, I contributed to writing the proposal and designing activities such as focus groups and experimental surveys of public opinion.
Mar. 2021 – Jun. 2024 Project	Leader of work package and research unit (University of Siena, coordinator) EUComMeet: Developing Participatory Spaces using a Multi-stage, Multi-level, Multi-mode, Multi-lingual, Dynamic Deliberative approach (M4D2) (Horizon 2020) The EUComMeet project experiments ways of systematically embedding deliberative practices and institutions in the multilevel system of governance and representation of the European Union. Additionally, it explores how deliberation and participation can help reduce polarisation, strengthen European identity, encourage inclusiveness, foster citizens' reflectivity and narrow the representative gap between policymakers and citizens. As a member of the University of Siena's team, I coordinated the WorkPackage (WP) on inclusion, contributed to writing the research proposal, elaborating the research design, and implementing the M4D2 deliberative setting as well as to data gathering and analysis.
Jul. 2019 – Apr. 2024 Project	Member of research unit (University of Siena, partner) EnTrust: Enlightened trust: An examination of trust and distrust in governance - conditions, effects and remedies (Horizon 2020) The goal of the project is to provide novel and multidisciplinary insights into trust in governance and measures to support sustainable and democratic societies in Europe. As a member of the University of Siena's team, I contributed to writing the proposal. I will contribute to conduct in-depth interviews and focus groups with citizens and governance actors.

Nov. 2018 – Oct. 2021
 Project

Member of research unit (University of Siena, partner)
SecEurity: European Common Defence and Shared Security in an Age of Brexit and Trump (Volkswagen Stiftung 2018)

The SecEurity Project examines the dynamic relationship between elites and masses in policy-making about common defense in the multi-level European system. Two overarching questions are at the heart of the project: What and how do elites and European mass publics think about greater (European) defence, security, and military integration? The project combines qualitative (elite interviews) and quantitative research (surveys with embedded experiments and media content analysis) to examine what factors affect European security policy preferences.

As a member of the University of Siena's team, I contributed to writing the proposal and designing activities such as elite interviews and experimental surveys of public opinion carried out in France, Germany, Italy, and Great Britain.

May 2018 – Apr. 2023
 Project

Member of research unit (University of Siena, coordinator)
The study of the determinants and the effects of populism in Italy with survey and experimental methods (MIUR Department of Excellence 2018-2022: Grant agreement no: 2272-2018-IA-PROFCMIUR 001)

The goal of the project is to study of the determinants and the effects of populism in Italy with survey and experimental methods. As a member of the University of Siena's team, I contributed to conceive the research design and to the organization of a panel survey of GfK panellists.

May 2018 – Jun. 2022
 Project

Member of research unit (University of Siena, partner)
IMAJINE: Integrative Mechanisms for Addressing Spatial Justice and Territorial Inequalities in Europe (Horizon 2020; Grant agreement no: 726950)

The goal of the project is to advance social science knowledge and understanding of territorial inequalities and related policy measures beyond the state-of-the-art, as well as contribute to the ongoing conceptualisation of territorial cohesion, spatial justice and the European social model. As a member of the University of Siena's team, I participated in the organization of a cross-sectional survey in 10 EU member states to study territorial inequalities in Europe.

Jul. 2015 – Jun. 2018
 Project

Member of research unit (University of Siena, coordinator)
EUENGAGE: Bridging the gap between public opinion and European leadership (Horizon 2020; Grant agreement no: 64928)

The goal of the EUENGAGE Project is twofold: first, to inquire into the current tensions between supranational EU governance and popular mobilisation at the national level, critically questioning EU-driven policies and EU legitimacy; second, to propose remedial actions based on sound empirical research on the relationship between public opinion, national and supranational political elites. As a member of the University of Siena's coordination team, I participated in the organization of an on-line deliberative forum to study the micro-foundational mechanisms of representation and an elite survey administered to parliamentarians of 10 EU member states.

Jun. 2013 – May 2015
 Project

Member of research unit (University of Siena, coordinator)

The Italian Foreign Policy in front of the new challenges of the international system: actors, institutions and policies (PRIN 2012; prot. 201032T8ZE)

The research aims to study how changes in the international and domestic political system over the last 10 years have influenced (a) Italian policy-makers' perception of the international system and Italy's role within it and (b) how foreign policy is conducted by the Italian political and administrative institutions. As a member of the University of Siena's research team, I carried out a mass and an elite survey of approximately 200 members of the political, economic, social and cultural Italian elites.

Mar. 2013 – May 2015
 Project

Member of research unit (University of Siena, partner)

Transworld: Transatlantic relations and the Future of Global Governance (7th EU Framework Programme; Grant agreement no: 290454)

TRANSWORLD is a consortium of 13 academic and research centres from the EU, the US and Turkey formed to research the evolution of the transatlantic relationship and its role in shaping global governance architectures. The project is mainly funded under the EU's 7th FP. My responsibilities were the analysis of public opinion data, the preparation of a policy paper on international security and the organization of a series of Delphi experiments.

Jun. 2010 – May 2013
 Project

Member of research unit (University of Siena, partner)

The Quality of deliberation (PRIN 2008; prot. 20085KSJRE)

The main objective of this research was to assess the long-term effects of participation in deliberative events on the attitudes of the citizens. Our research unit, which was composed of me, Prof. Pierangelo Isernia and Dr. Irena Fiket, conducted a CATI survey to assess the stability of opinion changes, the effects of participation on the general attitudes towards democracy and political participation in politics.

May-June 2009
 Project

Member of research unit (University of Siena, coordinator)

EuroPolis: A Deliberative Polity-Making Project (7th EU Framework Programme; grant agreement SSH7-CT-2009-225314)

The project intended to test whether deliberative democracy can contribute to address the democratic deficit in Europe, with particular reference to the 2009 European parliamentary elections. EuroPolis was a carefully designed experiment that assessed how political and social attitudes towards EU issues (i.e., immigration, climate change, EU policy-making process) change as a result of exposure to information, and what implications this has for political participation and voter turnout. I was part of the research staff and my responsibilities were: organization of small group discussion, distribution of participants into experimental groups, data analysis.

Mar. 2007	Member of research unit (University of Siena, coordinator)
Project	The Deliberative Citizens’ Consultation (6th Framework Programme; Grant agreement no. CIT3-CT-2005-513421) The DCC experiment, organised in parallel with other consultations taking place at the same moment in Malta, Romania, Sweden and the UK, was held in Turin on March 2007. The event was supported by two different projects, both aiming at better understanding the conditions and setbacks of furthering participation in Europe: the INTUNE Project and the European Citizens’ Consultation project. The experiment, which involved 40 citizens from all over Italy and about 200 citizens of the province of Turin, was focused on two points of interest: the future of Europe and topics of local interest (voting rights for immigrants in local elections, the Turin-Lyons high speed train line). My main responsibilities were: a) registration of the participants; b) coordinator of the facilitators’ group; c) data collection, input, and analysis.
